Plymouth Guild Plans Concert

All music lovers of the community are invited to attend a concert on Friday night, Dec. 7, at 8 o'clock at the First Congregational Church. This concert is the second to be given under the auspices of the Plymouth Guild of the Congregational church. The first one was given last spring and so many requests came in for an evening concert which the men could attend that this concert was planned with that in view.

A chorus group consisting of Mesdames W. A. Crowell, N. C. Cummings, C. L. Dimmitt, W. H. Doxsee, H. H. Duncan, R. A. Hohberger and E. B. Purrington have been working for several months preparing a group of numbers. James Ramp and Mrs. John Titsworth from San Francisco will each contribute to the program. There will be a silver offering to go toward the charity fund of the Guild to be used in local work.

The program will be as follows:

1. Choral — "Song of India" (Rimsky-Korsikow); "The Timid Shepherd." (Deems-Taylor)

2. Songs—"Ah, Moon of My Delight." (Lehman); "Cargoes" (Masefield); "Indian Summer" (Cademan); "Bois Eais" (Luly). Mr. James Ramp.

3. Duet—"Last Night" Kjerulf "Greeting" (Mendelssohn). Mrs. Philip Forsythe and Mrs. Wilbur Doxsee.

4. Piano—"Valcik" (Mokrejs) "Egeria" (Kroeger); "Fantasie Impromptu" C Minor (Chopin). Mrs. John Titsworth.

5. Songs—"Over the Steppe" (Gretchanioff); "Lullaby" (Cyril Scott). Mrs. Roy Hohberger.

6. Choral—"Where My Caravan Has Rested" (Lohr); "The Woodpecker" (Nevin); "Morning Hymn" (Henschel). Accompanists—Mrs. John Titsworth and Mrs Dudley Moulton.

The Greater Redwood Improvement Club will hold a masquerade dance tomorrow evening at the Woman's Club house on Clinton street. Miss Viola Mayzenholder is chairman of the committee which is making arrangements.

Rev. C. H. Stevens, formerly pastor of the Congregational church here, and now of Palo Alto was visiting friends here yesterday.

High School Notes

Parents and friends of Sequoia will have an opportunity of seeing the type of work carried on in the girls' physical education classes, January 19, at 8:00 p. m.

A complete demonstration of the work will be presented to the public in the gymnasium, with a large variety of numbers to keep the spectators amused.

This is the first time in the history of the school that a physical education department has staged an exhibition, and all the girls in the school are taking part in the production. The program will consist of work done by the classes in the past two months, and will take place in mass demonstration in floor work, competition between the eight highest groups in marching, mass dance numbers, a special dance program by the advanced dancing class, a volley ball and basketball game by the intermediate squads, and a tumbling exhibit by the after school Tumbling Club, in connection with the advanced swimming group.

Faculty members of the affair are Miss Mildred Brown, Mrs. Genevieve Robertson, and Miss Irene Bradley, physical education instructors. An admission of 25 cents will be charged, the money going into the high school treasury for use in the physical education department.

Work has started on the assembly program to be given by Die Kameraden, the German Club under the direction of Miss Juliane Wolters, adviser, and Ethel Johnson, who has charge of the entertainment. The program is to be given in assembly, January 17, 1929.

For all members of the football and basketball teams who have won their blocks during the past months of school in those sports, a Block "S" initiation is to be held today at the Sequoia high school. Frank Griffin has charge of the affair.

The choral classes are now practising Christmas music in preparation for the annual Christmas entertainment which is to be given in the Sequoia Union High School auditorium.

Hubert Barry was elected president, and Ahla Johnson, vice-president of the junior class at a meeting held Wednesday. The new officers will take the place of Carl Britschgi and George Shine, president and vice-president, respectfully, who have resigned.

SEQUOIA NEAR CHAMPIONSHIP

The game that will decide whether or not Sequoia will remain in the race for the P. A. L. championship in basketball will be played this Friday night on the home court.

Here are a few IFs concerned: IF Sequoia defeats Burlingame in the game of this week-end, and defeats them again on the following week end, Sequoia will be tied with San Mateo for the championship; IF San Mateo defeats San Jose.

Again, IF Sequoia should lose one of the Burlingame games, and San Mateo should lose to San Jose, there would be a triple tie for first place.

Burlingame has not yet been played in basketball, and consequently no "dope" has been formulated in regard to the results of the game. The game occurs at 7:45 Friday night and the regular admission of 25 cents will be charged.

S. F. Engineer Tells of Future Water Supply

Whether or not this county decides to merge with San Francisco there will be a sufficient supply of water for all future needs, according to N. A. Eckart, assistant engineer of San Francisco, who spoke at the luncheon meeting of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce this week. Eckart stated that by the formation of water districts this county could secure water from the Hetch Hetchy system without consolidation with San Francisco.

Eckart stated that the distribution system of the Spring Valley Water Co., will be taken over by San Francisco on February 1st of next year. The ultimate capacity of the Hetch Hetchy system, the engineer stated, will be 400,000,000 gallons per day. The present consumption of water by the peninsula is at present 9,000,000.

Many Attend Dedication Of Fire House

A large number of citizens gathered in the new westside fire house Sunday afternoon for the dedication of that new edifice. Z. T. Thorning, fire and police commissioner, acted as chairman for the interesting program which featured the occasion.

The program was preceeded by invocation by Rev. C. E. Kennedy, former pastor of Mt. Carmel Catholic church of this city. A flag, presented by the General Geo. S. Evans Post, Woman's Relief Corps, was then raised by the members of that organization, while Miss Gertrude Beeger sang, "The Star Spangled Banner," accompanied by the orchestra of the San Francisco fire department. A baritone solo by A. M. Cuthbertson followed.

Mayor Henry Beeger made a few remarks and was followed by Chaplain John H. Shively of the Pacific Coast Fire Chiefs Association, of which Chief Mark Ryan was president last year. He was followed by O. M. Carrington who sang, "California, Here I Come."

A short address by Chief Mark Ryan and the prayer by Rev. R. J. Currie, minister of the Congregational church, concluded the program.

A number of donations by individuals and organizations have been made to add to the convenience and comfort of the new fire house. A table and chesterfield set were presented by the city. The Kiwanis and Exchange clubs each presented a comfortable chair. An electric clock, and the eletric fixtures of the building were presented by Chief Mark Ryan. A table was given by Mrs. Mary Beeger, as well as rugs for the floor. A large rug was presented by the Redwood City Improvement Club; curtains were from Mrs. Emmett Donnelly and a lamp was presented by the Sequoia Union High School, which also presented the sign for the front of the building, which was made by the students of the manual training classes.

Redwood Parlor N. S. G. W. prtsented a flag pole and the flag was the gift of the Woman's Relief Corps. A reading table was presented by Z. T. Thorning, while Mr. Mrs. Thorning presented the firemen with a number of books. A fireplace set was the gift of Leonard & Holt. A radio was purchased by members of the Redwood City fire department. The garden work was the gift of George Hopkins, city gardener, who has made the grounds one of the most attractive spots of the town.

The dedication of the new building was attended by a number of visiting fire chiefs, among them being Chief Murphy of San Francisco and former Chief Short of Oakland.

Former Resident Passes Away

Mrs. Harvey Snow, a former pioneer resident of Redwood City, passed away at the home of her son, George Snow, in San Francisco last Sunday at the ripe old age of seventy-nine years.

The Snow family left here nearly thirty years ago after a residence of many years. Harvey Snow was a local carpenter. He worked on the Flood mansion at Menlo Park and the Ralston home at Belmont. His two uncles, Josiah and Joseph Snow, were contracting plasterers here in the sixties, and had much to do with the early development of Redwood City. They were the pioneer builders of this community.

Mrs. Snow was a sister of Mrs. Tisdale whose family lived on Arguello street for many years and was well known to all old pioneers of the county.

Mrs. Snow will be remembered for her kindly disposition and charming manner by those who knew here in other days when a young woman in this city. She was active in social affairs, thus making friends and enlarging her wide circle of acquaintances.

Her son, Winnie Snow, is the chief bookkeeper for the Western Meat Company at South San Francisco.

Her husband, Harvey Snow, predeceased her a number of years ago.

Kiwanians To Give Tree For County Patients

An interesting and enjoyable feature of the weekly meeting of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club this week was the performance on th piano accordian of P. Penna of this city. Penna is an expert on this instrument and his music was enjoyed by the members of the club. Miss Trimble of the San Francisco health farm who was to haye addressed the club concerniny the work at her institution, was unable to be present. The chairman of the meeting was Z. T. Thorning.

A suggestion was made by E. B. Hinman that the club plant an evergreen tree at the county community hospital to be used as a living Christmas tree and be decorated annually for the enjoyment of those confined to that institution. His suggestion was received with enthusiasm by the club and John Poole, chairman of the county board of supervisors, stated that the county would be glad to have the club take such a move.

President Layng then appointed a committee consisting of E. B. Hinman, John Poole and C. M. Doxsee to see about getting a tree suitable for this use.

TURKEY SHOOT

Owing to the success of the last turkey shoot under the auspices of the San Mateo County Fish and Game Club, it was requested by pleased patrons that the sport be continued and accordingly the club announces other shoots with some variations to be held in the same grounds by courtesy of the Spring Valley Water Co. on the Crystal Springs road, turning from the highway opposite Mills Memorial hospital on Sunday, December 9th and Sunday, December 23rd, beginning early and contining all day.

A fire, believed to have resulted when the engine backfired, resulted Monday in seriously damaging a Cadillac car belonging to the James Crowe Undertaking Company. The car was at the Peninsula garage. The fire department was summoned and extinguished the flames after the car had been pushed out into the street.

Local Masons Elect Officers

At the regular stated meeting of Redwood City Lodge No. 168, F. & A. M., held last evening at the Masonic temple, officers for 1929 were elected. Walter W. Hilton was chosen master; Eastland Britton as senior warden and Gilman Merrill as junior warden. Harry Potts and Norris Cummings were each re-elected to their present positions, that of secretary and treasurer, respectively.

These officers together with the appointive officers, whose names will be announced later, will be installed in office on December 27.

Funeral Held Here For Late P. Chamberlain

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at the Masonic Temple for Philander P. Chamberlain, who passed away early Friday morning, following a long illness. The services were under the auspices of Redwood City Lodge No. 168 F. & A. M., of which the deceased had been a member for many years. The ritual of the order was performed by C. G. Lambert, past master of the lodge.

The funeral of the well-known man was attended by hundreds of friends from all sections of the county. The large hall of the Masonic Temple was filled to capacity. On the following day the remains were cremated at Cypress Lawn cemetery.

P. P. Chamberlain was for 44 years county treasurer of this county. He retired from office in 1926 because of failing health. Shortly before hs death he had celebrated his 88th birthday. This occasion was spent in his room because of the illness which resulted in his death. He had been confined to his hotel room for several months.

During the Civil War P. P. Chamberlain served with the Union army, and later was engaged in one of the Indian campaigns. In the early '70s he came to this city and engaged in the general merchadise business. His store was continued until 1914 when the increase of county business necessitated the devotion of all his time to the office of county treasurer.

P. P. Chamberlain was one of the best known residents of Redwood City and the great number of floral offerings at the funeral Sunday, as well as the many sorrowing friends spoke eloquently of the high esteem in which he was held here.

Truck Wrecked By Rolling Car

As George Sheets, driver of a truck for the Union Oil Co.., was returning to the plant of the oil company on the Middlefield road last Friday and was crossing the Dumbarton branch of the Southern Pacific, he waited for a freight train to pass and believing the way clear, proceeded onto the tracks. But a box car which had been "kicked loose" from the train in order to be shunted onto another track, was following a short distanre behind the train, and this car crashed into the oil truck.

The truck was hurled a considerable distance by the force of the blow. It was completely demolished and the driver was extricated with difficulty from the wreckage by other workers at the Union Oil plant. He was treated by Dr. F. S. Gregory. His injuries consisted of cuts and bruises but are not serious.

An informal dance will be given by Redwood Council Y. M. I. at Carmel Men's hall, Brewster and Warren streets, Friday night, December 14. Towne's orchestra will furnish the music. Refreshments will be served. The public is cordially invited.

The Fraternal Aid Union will hold a card party in the Foresters Hall on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30

FISH, GAME CLUB TO MEET IN S.M.

Eight San Mateo County members of the Fish and Game Club journeyed to Oakland this week to attend a meeting of the State Associated Sportsmen. Great stimulus has recently been put at the back of conservation and propagation of fish and game by the new regional program.

San Mateo county is associated with San Francisco county, Alameda and Contra Costa counties, the four forming a unit; San Mateo being represented in all the ten communities.

The discussion centered largely around the many proposals to be made to the next legislature to amend exisiting laws and pass new ones in the interest of the four counties mentioned.

The delegates and committeemen numbered about one hundred and fifty and represented several thousand members.

San Mateo was chosen as the seat of the next meeting to be held in about two weeks and a very large gathering is anticipated.

Indianola Council Fetes Officers

On Tuesday evening at the Foresters hall a reception was tenderd to Great Pocahontas Laura Sporleda and her Great Chiefs by Indianola Council No. 176 Degree of Pocahontas.

Five candidates were initiated, the work being put on by the degree team, which was later highly praised by the Great Chiefs for the excellence of their ritualistic work. After a pleasing talk by the Great Pocahontas and her Great Chiefs, and the presentation of flowers and presents to the visiting officers the business of the meeting was closed, after which an entertainment was enjoyed by all.

Those on the program were Frank and Wardel Tiffany in "Almost Anything," composed of songs, joneo and tap dancing.

Vocal solos by Viola M. Mayssnholder, accompanied by Mrs. Emily Gass on the piano; vocal solo by Mrs. Emily Gass, accompanied by Florence Gass were also enjoyed. The program was followed by a banquent. The decorations were orchid and green.

Council Grants Laundry Permit

The much disputed question of whether or not a steam laundry should be granted a permit to operate on the property cornering on Jefferson street and railroad avenue, was finally brought to a conclusion Monday night when the council voted to grant the permit, despite the protests of adjoining property owners.

The permit was applied for several months ago by Thomas Nelson. It was referred to the planning commission and was endorsed by the real estate board and by the chamber of commerce. Since the inception of the matter, however, the granting of a permit for a laundry at this place has met the opposition of A. M. Robertson, owner of the adjoining property.

The Robertsons have made their home on the adjoining property for 25 years, and their property is devoted entirely to residence uses. The erection of a steam laundry next door to their home, they feel, will damage their property for residential use.

At the meeting Monday ebening both Mr. and Mrs. Robertson and their son were present and protested against the granting of the permit. The board was, however unanimous in its decision to allow the laundry to erect a building at this location. The councilmen, however, told the Robertsons that should they desire to have their property reclassified as light industrial proerty that the council would act favorably upon the proposal. In order to grant a permit for the laundry it was necessary to change the zoning ordinance and to classify the land as light industrial instead of residential.

Next Saturday evening the Women's Recreational Club will hold a dance in the Sequoia gymnasium The ladies have secured O'Connor's orchestra to provide music for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Sahlberg of this city had as guests over Thanksgiving, Mr. and Mrs. James Stewart and two daughters of Oakland.

A dance will be given Saturday evening at the Sequoia gymnasium by the Iota Zeta club of the high school. The dance is the annual event of the boys' club. The admission will be 50 and 25 cents.

Exchangites In District Meet

Practically every Exchange club of the peninsula was present at the district meeting held Tuesday evening at the Benjamin Franklin hotel in San Mateo. More than one hundred and twenty-five Exchangites and guests were present at the meeting which was presided over by District Governor Ira H. Potter of South San Francisco.

An interesting and instructive address was given by Professor Paul Cherrington of Stanford University, who is known as the foremost marketing expert in the United States today. His subject was retail marketing and the appeal to the consumer. His talk illustrated many of the successful methods used by nationally known concerns in the development of their businesses, showing that the public rewards and appreciates service rendered. Well-known radio artists of San Francisco and Oakland added to the evening's entertainment. Each club presented a stunt. "Fifteen Minutes in the Dead Cat Cafe," was given by the Redwood City club, under the direction of Frank Griffin.

Of the clubs present, Redwood City's attendance was the largest.

State President Ralph Wight of Martinez and State Marshal Ed Carlisle of San Francisco were present.

The meeting Tuesday evening had the best display of exchange held at the next meeting to be held in 1929 is looked forward to with interest by Exchangites of this district.

TAX RECEIPTS BREAK RECORD

The largest amount of taxes ever received in any one day at the office of Tax Collector A. McSweeney occured last Monday, the final day to settle, when $85,000 was taken in over the counter, and the sum of $160,000 by mail, making a total of $1,373,000 collected since October 13. The total tax to be collected will be two and one half millions. The heaviest tax payer is the Spring Valley Water Company who paid $93,393, first installment, last week. The company pay about one-twelfth of the taxes of the county.

McSweeney says that more money was paid at the first installent this year than ever before in the history of the office.

Big Sums In Inheritance

The executor of the estate of C. DeGuingne, deceased, was granted permission yesterday by Judge Buck to mortgage the property of the estate for $100,000 to pay the inheritance tax of $53,000, the expense of administration of the estate and to settle some debts. Today Hugh Porter of Menlo Park will be granted permission to raise $15,000 on the estate of his mother Mrs. Patchel. Of this sum $75,000 will be paid into the county treasurer for the inheritance tax making a total of approximately $128,000 to be paid in from both estate. This money will be forwarded next spring to the state treasury at Sacramento. Mrs. Cooper, the county treasurer, will retain a small sum as her fees. The county will receive none of this vast sum. G. Elmer Jennings, the popular city judge of Atherton, is one of the executors of the De Guigne estate and Rudolph Whiting is the attorney for the estate.

LOCAL DEALER TELLS OF PHILCO'S NEW RADIO SETS

New and important developments in radio receiving sets, made by the Philco Comapny, have caused the Buckley Radio Service to put a complete line of these all-electric models.

Bill Buckley said yesterday in announcing the arrival of his Philco sets:

"The new Philco sets, answering as they do very distinct demand of the public, in the matter of radio receivers, already have had a wide sale in all parts of the United States. The Philco sets offer something distinctly new in the matter of volume, absence of aerial, selectivity of stations and decoration of cabinets. Thus they not only promise to have a wide vogue but they will do much to increase the popularity of radio in that they make reception much easier than it ever was before."

A card party will be given by Redwood Social and Development Club Thursday evening, December 13 at the club rooms Roosevelt and Ramona avenue. The proceeds are to be used to give the kiddies of west Redwood a Christmas party. Mrs. L. Marzlin is chairman of the committee arranging the card party.

ANCIENT SILVER MINES

WHEN Hannibal was preparing to cross the Alps for his attack on Rome about 200 B. C., he worked the silver mines of Spain with slave labor to secure funds to pay his soldiers.

We cannot go out now and dig up silver for ourselves when we need money. Instead it is necessary regularly to lay aside part of our current income in a bank account.

ADVERTISING EGGS BRINGS PROFITS

There is a market waiting for the eggs that the progressive poultryman advertises.

So says W. A. Sumner of the agricultural journalism department at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. Many poultrymen are finding large profits in a "direct to the consumer" business and are building up a flourishing business through small inexpensive classified advertisements in city and town newspapers.

Before beginning, however, Sumner emphasizes that the future advertiser must be sure that he has something worth advertising and that he can give prompt replies to those who answer. To get top prices for his eggs and bring repeat orders, the poultryman must have strictly fresh eggs that he can guarantee. But, it pays to sell them, for city customers are willing to pay from five to ten cents a dozen above the retail prices for strictly fresh eggs.

Often a single insertion of an advertisement will bring enough inquiries to build up a steady trade for months to come, but the sales copy must be attractive enough to draw attention in competition with all the other advertisements in the column.

In writing the advertisements, Sumner gives this hint: "Make the copy detailed enough to furnish all the necessary information, including prices." The copy must be brief, for it is paid for by the words, but no important facts should be left out.

A trade mark also helps when selling to out-of-town customers, if it is attractive and easily remembered. When it is used on neat cartons, crates, or packages containing clean, fresh eggs, it helps bring more orders and makes it easy for customers to tell their friends about the poultryman's products.

Fresh Warm Water Is Essential for Layers

Ice water may taste good at a hot July picnic but in winter it does not appeal to either people or laying hens. If either were forced to consume ice water in winter they would drink no more than absolutely necessary. In the case of poultry this would mean serious falling off in egg production. It might mean serious injury to the health of the fowls.

If water were an expensive part of the ration all would probably see that the fowls always had plenty of it. They would also give it to them in the most effective manner. But because water is a gift of nature, we are apt to overlook its importance.

The egg supply from a group of laying hens can be practically cut off in from two to three days by interfering with the water supply or by furnishing it in frozen buckets, etc. With the winter months ahead it will pay to see that the hens get plenty of water and for best results it should not be too chilly. If fresh water is given at least twice a day the hens will consume more than where it is not offered fresh. For this reason do not favor large containers; they are apt to be neglected.

Poultry Hints

If a concrete poultry yard is used, sweep or scrub it each day.

* * *

Frozen toes and feet are a bad thing for fowls, and if noticed need attention.

* * *

If pullets replace yearlings in the flock each year diseases such as T. B. will be reduced considerably.

* * *

Heating drinking water for the hens with coal or wood is much cheaper than letting them heat it with food.

* * *

Poultry culture, like any other business, must be regulated according to demand. It is a proved fact that, for table use, the dark-legged breeds, or at least those with legs of a color other than yellow, are the best.

* * *

The nesting boxes should be in the darkest part of the hen house, and should all face away from the door.

* * *

Sprinkle a little carbolic acid in the hens' dust bath occasionally. After each rain stir the dust and make it fine again.

* * *

Sweet milk and sour milk are about equally valuable as chick feed, but one of them should be fed exclusively. If the milk diet is changed bowel trouble often results.

* * *

Ventilation of poultry houses is essential. One hundred hens give off three and one-half to four gallons of water every 24 hours.

* * *

Large supplies of eggs are keeping the prices down, and under these conditions it behooves every flock owner to get rid of his low producers.

* * *

Even though the culls must be sold at low prices, they should be marketed immediately, for they will lose more money for their owners for every day they are kept in the flock.

* * *

Pullets which have reached maturity and possess sufficient bodyweight before they start laying are in the best possible condition to give good production throughout the first laying year.

* * *

Birds that have made good growth and are not undersized are all right to encourage to lay. Feed them a regular laying mash in hoppers and feed grain at the rate of about 12 pounds per 100 birds per day if they are Leghorns and 14 pounds if they are of the heavier breeds.

THE COUNTRY CHURCH

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

The old country church was standing by the roadside deserted, as we rode by it. A few gravestones were standing askew and crumbling from the effects of frost and rain in the enclosure at the back of the structure. The fence which had once kept out marauding animals was falling into decay. The church itself was weather beaten, unpainted for years, its windows broken and its roof torn and open to the rain. It was a relic of days that are gone. The concrete road running in front of its doorway was a sufficient explanation of its abandonment. If country people go to church now, as some of them happily do, the town is only a few minutes distant, and is easily reached. We count distance by time now and not by miles.

And yet at one time the old church was the center of rural activity. Services were held in it every Sunday—sometimes even twice on Sunday and the sermons were long. It was a gathering place for social contacts, though many of those who attended its weekly services would have resented the suggestion that they were there excepting for the serious worship of God. Children were baptized in the old church; young people were married in it, every winter, no doubt, religious enthusiasm was stirred, and indifferent members were brought back through the instrumentality of the revival meeting. At week-ends some rural vocalist organized a singing school, and the neighborhood young people flocked to his tutelage, not so much because they wanted their voices trained, perhaps, as because it gave them an opportunity to be together. Friends gathered in the old church to pay a last tribute to the dead before they found their last resting place in the church yard in the rear. I have no recollection that anyone, no matter how agonistic in life he might have been, was ever consigned to his grave without some simple service being enacted in the neighborhood church. It would have been unseemly to have done otherwise.

But that is all a thing of the past today, and the old church stands abandoned and its purpose almost forgotten. There were four country churches in the community in which I first lived, for dogma was a vital thing then, and the Baptists had no dealings with the Presbyterians, but not one of these churches is in existence today. They are torn down or turned into barns or dwelling houses. They are no more centers of activity, religious or social.

Communities lose something by the change, I believe. There is an absence of unity which once held a neighborhood together. There is not so much friendliness or exchange of courtesies as there once was. Neighbors know each other less intimately and co-operate less freely than in the old days when the country church brought them regularly together. There is more comfort, no doubt, more opportunity for amusement and entertainment in the nearby town, life has in it more thrill and more excitement, but I never see the old country church without wishing that in this regard, the old friendly days could come back again.

Bridge Links States

Phoenix, Ariz.—Replacing the ancient ferry that has served northern Arizona and southern Utah dwellers since white men first began to travel the uncharted area of the Painted desert, the Lee's Ferry bridge, highest structure of its kind in the world, is to be formally put into use with elaborate dedication ceremonies next June.

The bridge will open up a great expanse of country and eventually result in a direct Mountain states' automobile route from Canada to Mexico.

Located at the upper reaches of the Grand canyon in the wild, unsettled portion of northern Arizona, the bridge will provide for the first time a handy route of transportation between Arizona and Utah.

It will be the only bridge crossing the Colorado river in Arizona north of Topac, near Needles, Calif., and will provide an easy way for tourists from Arizona to reach Bryce canyon, Zion National park and Rainbow Natural bridge in southern Utah; the north rim of the Grand canyon and the great virgin forests in northern Arizona, and for travelers through southern Utah to visit the Painted desert, south rim of the Grand canyon, petrified forests and other natural wonders in Arizona.

It is expected to open up trade and traffic between Utah and Arizona, neighboring states that have been separated by the great cleft known as one of the wonders of the world. It will be a means toward developing commerce and of opening a vast land that is known to hardly anybody except the Hopi Indians, who roam the desert.

The three-hinged, steel arch bridge, considered by engineers to be more rigid than the suspension type, is 467 feet above the stream bed, and its ends rest in precipitous cliffs which border the Colorado river. The span itself is 615 feet long, with the bridge over all being 800 feet. So far as can be determined, it is the highest automobile bridge in the world.

Because of the height, engineers encountered difficulty in devising a way to construct the bridge, as there was no way of building false supports from the bottom of the canyon. The cantilever plan was employed and the supports were constructed in the granite walls. As the bridge was built out from the wall, first on one side, then on the other side of the river, toggle joints were used to extend the huge steel beams until the two sections met in the center and were joined.

Material had to be trucked 135 miles over a seldom traveled desert road to the site. Some of the steel sections used in the construction were 56 feet long and weighed 14 tons. These had to be hauled by truck and trailer.

Four sergeants and twenty-three privates were with the Lewis and Clark expedition.

HUGGINS ON VACATION

Miller Huggins has arrived at St. Petersburg, Fla., his winter home, to enjoy golfing and fishing. The manager of the world's champion New York Yankees hastened to renew his membership in a golf club and lease a small cruiser for fishing expeditions in the gulf.

Back to Old Dances

Washington.—Turning completely away from the jazz of recent years, Washington society this winter will revive the stately, old-fashioned cotillion as quite the latest and most correct thing in dancing.

Debutantes who figure largely on the season's calendar are eagerly planning lengthened frocks of frills and furbelows to match the dignified figures of the cotillion. They are consulting hair dressers concerning false knots of curls to attach to their bobbed locks.

Invitations for the first of the affairs to be given at the Mayflower hotel December 10 by the Washington Bachelors are already out. The list of the committee in charge is thickly sprinkled with honorables and generals and commanders.

All sorts of novel stunts and favors are being planned. There will be two orchestras, one imported from New York. Favors, by which the men will find their partners, will eclipse anything seen in Washington for many a day. The older members of the Bachelors' club who are versed in the ceremonious etiquette of a former day when society shone in stately splendor instead of scintillating jazz, will lead the younger generation through the figures of the cotillion.

Not alone the cotillions, but the fact that many of the season's debutantes will emerge into the social limelight with not only one coming-out party, but two, makes this season unique. Heretofore one tea or one ball was deemed sufficient to give Miss Debbie her due, but now many of the younger set are demanding both.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

A Few Hundred Below Freezing

Scientists do not shirk at low temperatures. In fact they are still trying to get to the real bottom of the temperature scale, so-called "absolute zero." This would mean a frigidity of some 459 degrees. At this point molecules cease to move—everything stands still. Man could not live in anything like this temperature.

Explain Spark Plug in Very Simple Language

There's a simple way to picture the spark plug that makes it altogether more understandable for the average motorist. It is, simply, to look upon the porcelain as a continuation of the insulation and the electrode as a projection of the wire leading from the distributor. It makes no difference what make of plug in question, this principle maintains throughout the field. A cracked porcelain, the cause of much plug failure, is identical with a break in the insulation of the wire leading to the plug.

High Speed Travel.

London, England—Lieut. Darcy Greig has traveled faster than any human being ever traveled before, but not fast enough to set a record. His plane flew at the rate of 319.57 miles an hour. The speed is not officially recognized as a record because it was not five miles an hour better than the existing mark.

Rift in Philosophy

Vancouver, B. C.—A philosophic cult with a reported membership of 2,000 Americans and Canadians has been revealed in a series of charges and countercharges of theft over the handling of the institution's funds. The colony, known as the Aquarian foundation, had attracted little notice in its sequestered location on Vancouver island at Cedar-by-the-Sea, near Nanaimo, until its sixty-year-old leader and its secretary-treasurer were arrested for embezzlement.

Discord broke into open strife when Edward A. Wilson, president of the foundation and known as Brother XII, opened another colony nearby on Valdez island, called the Mandieth settlement.

He followed this by accusing Robert England, secretary-treasurer and reported ex-American secret service agent, with embezzling $2,800 of the institution's funds.

England, released on bail, retaliated by accusing Wilson of misappropriating $13,000. Wilson was released on $20,000 bond only to be met with injunctions and trespass charges.

The colony is said to have been founded by a dozen wealthy Americans and Canadians for the study of philosophy.

While the community is small in the fall, it numbered many times its present residents during the summer, when hundreds of students, mostly from Wilson's ex-home, learned the codes of the sect. The visitors included both men and women.

Restore House Where Gen. T. J. Jackson Died

Richmond, Va.—The little house near Guinea in which Gen. T. J ("Stonewall") Jackson died has been restored by the United Daughters of the Confederacy as a shrine to the famous southern leader.

General Jackson was shot at Chancellorsville when he and a party of his horsemen, mistaken in the darkness for members of the federal cavalry, were fired upon by Confederate soldiers. Jackson was wounded by three bullets and as the reins dropped from his hands, his horse, frantic with terror, almost carried its rider into the federal lines before it could be stopped.

His last order before being borne from the field on a stretcher was to one of his staff: "You must hold your ground, General Pender; you must hold out to the last, sir."

Many Titles, but Only Half a Throne

Here, seated, is Ras Tafari, who boasts of some three dozen titles, including "King of Kings" and "Shadow of God Upon Earth." This newest emperor in the world is negus of Abyssinia and emperor of Ethiopia. He has the capacity of regent. The Empress Zauditu, faced recently by the alternative of an armed revolt headed by Ras Tafari, consented to share her throne with him, thus Abyssinia is the only country in the world where the emperor and empress are not at the same time husband and wife.

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Church Divided Into Orthodox and Catholic

Many a word in its origin is a screen concealing an interesting shelf of history. "Orthodox," from Greek words meaning true opinion, is an example. The first occasion of its use seems to have been by Clement of Alexandria in the Second century.

It was used to describe the whole church in very ancient times, but after the great division, when the church became divided between Greek and Roman, the former church seems to have appreciated the word "orthodox" as describing itself and the latter the word "catholic." The division of the church into Roman Catholic and Greeek Orthodox was one of the results of the division of the Roman empire, which, for a time, had two capitals, Constantinople and Rome. But "orthodox" was early and generally used as a kind of official description of the eastern church. The division came around A. D. 313.—Detroit News.

"Magician's" Good Work.

They were found hanging on Mrs. Hibbard's garage door the next day.

When your Children Cry for It

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless, a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done, for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you have the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. Never be without it; some mothers keep an extra bottle, unopened, to make sure there will always be Castoria in the house. It is effective for older children, too; read the book that comes with it.

Our Future Secure

TO use an old and homely expression, there's something in the wind. We refer to Redwood City and particularly to the future. The events of the past few months have been hard on the pessimists. Store after store has opened up here; branches of nation-wide institutions—Woolworth, Montgomery Ward & Co., to say nothing of the many chain groceries of which the town is well supplied. And within a few more weeks the J. C. Penney Company will open a store here.

Such institutions as these do not come here just on a chance. Nor do they come here to serve such a town as Redwood City is today. These are based upon expert calculations of the future—of what Redwood City will be five or ten years from now. And those estimates are flattering to this city to say the least.

We welcome stores of this type not alone because they improve the town, because they bring trade to our city which formerly went elsewhere; but, and this is the important point, we welcome them because they demonstrate more forcibly than any words could do so, what big concerns of the nation think of the chances for Redwood City's future.

As long as such stores as these locate in Redwood City, we may well believe that the future of the town is secure. This alone would be sufficient indication.

Buy it in Redwood

WE of America have been accused of commercializing our holidays and holy days. Even Chistmas, it has been said, has become a day of merchandising and commercalism. This is perhaps true to a certain extent. Few opportunities are missed these days for an increase of sales.

But considering the day in its highest and most exalted light, there yet remains the necessity for the purchase of presents, and it is this phase of the Christmas season which we are now considering.

Every year vast sums are expended by the residents of Redwood City collectively for Christmas purchases. Here is a vast revenue which should come to the local merchant. More and more people are coming to believe that their interests are best served by spending their money in Redwood City. Each purchase may in itself be of little consequence, yet taken in the aggregate they decide the extent to which the local merchant, and with him, the town will prosper.

Never before have the opportunities existed for trading in Redwood City that exist today. Redwood City's trading district has manifested a remarkable activity during the past year and literally dozens of stores are today offering high-class merchandise to the people of this city.

Practically every line is represented in this trading area. As fine goods are offered here as in in any metropolitan store and at prices commensurate with the value. Redwood City's business district is growing—growing bigger and better. Help these merchants who have placed their faith in Redwood City by buying in Redwood City, for these people are the neucleus around which the prosperity of the city must evolve.

Bulletin Tells of Redwood's Advantages

The advantages of a town are often more readily recognized by those on the outside than by those who dwell within its confines and by their very nearness fail to fully comprehend the worth of their possessions. It is gratifying, therefore, to the people of Redwood City when a metropolitan paper on its own initiative and without expectation of immediate return, devotes the greater part of a page to the advantages of this city.

The San Francisco Bulletin on Monday carried a story concerning Redwood City which has proved of great interest to the people of the community. A story such as this, and accompanied by a half page of pictures in invaluable advertising to this section, as it will be read throughout the Pacific Coast.

The Bulletin's story was in part as follows:

Redwood City is primarily a city of homes, located 25 miles south of San Francisco on the El Camino Real and the Southern Pacific Railroad.

Climatic conditions are exceptional, West of the city a level plain extends for two miles toward the wooded hills which rise gradually into the San Mareno mountains. These foothills and mountains afford a beautiful setting for homes and they are responsible for the even temperature and freedom from wind and fog which characterize the climate of this city.

United States weather bureaus statistics for Redwood City over a period of 36 years gives clear days, 233; cloudy days, 132; rainy days, 43; average temperature for the warmest month (August), 70 degrees; coldest (January), 51 degrees. Average rainfall, 19.95 inches.

Many Advantages

Educational advantages here are splindid. Five elementary schools are located in five sections of the city embracing kindergarten in each district and third to seventh and eighth grades. All teachers are normal or university trained instructors.

Each school has ample playground facilities. The intermediate schoo l (seventh and eighth grades is practically a junior high school. The Sequoia Union high school is the finest secondary school in the United States. Located on a 40-acre tract, in a picturesque setting, are commodious buildings, costing approximately $1,000,000.

Sequoia Union high school is rated high at the different colleges and universities of California. This school was recently reported by a professor of a large, eastern university as the best high school in the United States, after a careful study of all the high schools in the country. Student self-control and honor systems prevail.

Churches and organizations are well covered All leading denominations are represented here with modern edifice, their pulpits occupied by able clergymen. There are Baptist, Catholic, Christian Science, Congregationalist, Episcopal, Lutheran, Methodist and undenominational.

Besides the fraternal organizations and two service clubs, Exchange and Kiwanis, there is an up-to-date Women's club taking care of the social life of the community. The Real Estate Board is an active body with a membership of 40, and the Chamber of Commerce has a membership of 225. There is also a Merchants' Association with credit bureau in conjunction.

Rapidly Growing

The business section is developing rapidly. A new theater building is being completed to seat 1500 persons, also prividing splendid modern stores and offices served by elevator. Montgomery Ward is about to occupy a large store soon to be completed. Penney & Co. will be here in two months' time and Woolworth's has been open just a few months.

The industrial location is ideal Sixteen plants are in operation here. Land is available either on deep water or not as is required. A municipal wharf and warehouses is anticipated in the near future which will give shipping accommodations to all concerns in this region. The present payroll exceeds $2,000,000 annually.

Shipping Facilities

Shipping facilities are supplied by the Southern Pacific railroad, with terminal freight rates and through trucking lines making daily delieveries. Eastern shipments reach here via Dumbarton railroad bridge route.

Passenger service also is well taken care of with 68 trains daily and a bus line with half-hour service. The Western Pacific railroad is now planning to build a road from San Francisco to Redwood City and thence across the bay at Dumbarton bridge. This will afford us a new transcontinental line.

The southern arm of the bay, with its deep water channel, skirts the shore at Redwood City. A channel leading into the industrial property of this city makes it possible for large ocean-going steamers to load cargo and go out at high tide. Such service is being funished daily to one of the big concerns here from their private docks now. The municipality is acquiring acreage on deep water for harbor purposes, where docks and shipping facilities will be provided.

MENLO PARK

Mrs. Edward Rieper, a former resident of Menlo Park, passed away in San Francisco yesterday after a long illness.

The Menlo Park Planning Commission held an important meeting Monday night and transacted much rountine business.

City Engineer George Kneese was present and presented a map prepared by his showing the duplication of street names and the contour of the city. He explained a system of street numbering. He suggested that the base be taken from the Middlefield road to the west and from the San Francisquito creek to the north. His suggestion that the thoroughfare running east and west be designated as avennes and those running from north to south be called roads or streets or lanes.

The commissioners went over the maps carefully. They discovered numerous duplication of names In one instance they discovered that there were three Fremont streets in town. After considerable discussion the street committee of the commission was selected to rename the street where duplication of same appeared and to number the houses and to report to the commission when the work was completed. The city council will finally pass upon the report of the commission when it is submitted.

The street committee is composed of J. H. Sullivan, Miss Gale and F. W. Johnson.

The quail season opened last Saturday. Up to date we have seen no one who killed any of the birds. Quail are becoming scarce in this county. The great development of the county in the rural districts has driven the birds to other localities.

The rainfall for the last storm was .78 of an inch aking a total of three inches fo the season.

WOODSIDE

The services at the Woodside church next Sunday will partake somewhat of the nature of a birthday celebration for Rev. Benjamin St. John who will reach his eighteth birthday at that time. Mr. St. John has promised to give some reminiscences of his busy life many years of which were passed as a pioneer mission pator. Several of his friends from down the peninsula as far as San Jose have signified their intention of being present.

The new home of Herman Wobber situated on a high point in the hills adoining the Bear Gulch property was opened for ocupancy on Thanksgiving Day. The home of Edward Wobber, his brother, now nearing completion, is expected to be ready for opening at Christmas time.

The Pacific Telephone Co. has a large crew of men stretching the cables for the new system to be opened in Woodside by Feb. 1st. The new service will be the automatic dial system with a central station at Woodside thus obviating the necessity of calling Redwood City in order to get your next door neighbor on the telephone. Most of the new lines will be main lines which will also result in the improvement of the service.

The ladies of the Parent-Teacher Association have finished their preparations for the bazaar to be held on Friday evening. Many household articles of exquisite workmanship have been made for the bazaar by the ladies of the association and others have been contributed by others of the community. The occasion will present an opportunity to purchase Christmas present of a distinctive character and at a reasonable price.

Russell Slade and family vacated their home here on Thursday. This home upon which the Slades had expended a great deal of thought and care has been sold to Fred Hotalling of San Francisco.

GORGAS MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

SOURCES OF HUMAN POISONING PROVED

By MANUEL L. ADLER, D. D. S., New York City

(This series of articles is prepared under the direction of the Gorgas Memorial, which is organized to perpetuate the life work of the late Major-General Gorgas. Offices of the Gorgas Memorial are at 1331 G Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.)

To check up on a theory, a group of scientists recently inoculated a selection of healthy animals with germs taken from the abscessed teeth of some persons who were suffering from various body ailments. The investigators found that the animals were soon suffering from the very same ailments as the patients from whom the germs were taken, thus proving that infected teeth cause diseases of the body.

People suffering with diseases of the heart and kidney, of the alimentary canal, of the nervous system, of metabolism, of bones and muscles, cancer, tuberchlosis, etc., should have their teeth examined and x-rayed, and should correct any defects that may be found.

While it cannot be said that infected teeth are the cause of all our troubles, the teeth should be looked after because in a good number of cases the have definitely been proven to be the source of infection.

The germs from the abscessed teeth are found to reach their destination in the vital organs via the blood stream. Since it has been shown that the blood travels in a continued cycle, we can readily understand how blood traveling to the teeth may carry off these toxins and spread them along the entire blood system. It is where these toxins lodge that trouble arises. The head, arms, hands, internal organs, legs and feet are all exposed to the infetion.

The blood system may be likened to the yards of a railroad system, with its number of tracks and its connecting switches enabling a train to move from one track to another, except that it presents a greater and more intriate network of blood vessels or "tracks." The blood travels along two main divisions, the arteries and the veins These in turn divide and subdivide into tiny branches passing to all parts of the body.

The headuarters of this system is the heart, which is constantly working. To it, coming from the veins, is brought the blood that has already passed through the body. The pumps of the heart drive it hrough the lungs, where it is refreshened and recharged, and then another pair of pumps drive it along the arteries through out the body. And so we have an automatic cycle working constantly.

An abscessed tooth may cause many body ailments, by giving off toxins or poisons that may travel along this blood system. Have your teeth examined two or three times a year to prevent trouble developing. Do not wait until it develops and your physician advises you to consult a dentist.

A flock of Cedar Wax Wings arrived from the north during the week and at once the birds sought the berry trees on the court house grounds to the rear of the building. They were quite hungry after their long jouney, furnishing much amusement to the pretty young girls comprising the clerk's office, who watched the little travelers gulp the luscious fruit of the hawthorne trees.

SPAIN AND AFRICA LINKED BY PHONE

Another continent was linked with the vast network of telephone lines that connect America with Continental Europe when trans-Atlantic telephone service was extended to all telephones in Spain and to Ceuta in Spanish Morocco, Africa, on November 26. Ceuta is reached from Spain by means of a submarine cable across the Straits of Gibraltar.

Extension of telephone service from America to the shores of the Mediterranean brings vividly to mind the striking contrast of methods of communication, ancient and modern. Spanish navigators who visited the Pacific Coast during the sixteenth centur returned to Spain with their accounts of adventure and discovery only after months and in some cases years of hazardous ocean and land travel. Today, communication with that country from the Pacific Coast is instantaneous.

Spain has aproximately 141,500 telephones serving a population estimated at 22,450,000.

TAX AMENDMENT GIVEN GREAT LEAD

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 6—(CNB—San Mateo County, by giving the measure an "aye" vote of 11,054, as compared with 4405 'noes' aided in rolling up an almost three to one majority for Proposition No. 3, the tax amendment on the general election ballot, it was disclosed here today with the announcement of the official vote on the new bank and intangibles' levy.

The state vote on the tax proposal showed: Yes, 891,941; No, 328,612—a victory heralded by state leaders as perhaps the greatest majority ever given a new form of taxation by the California electorate.

"Intelligent newspaper support" was listed by Irving Martin, chairman of the State Tax Commission, as the most powerful actor in secuaing approval of the tax amendment and averting a threatened loss of $22,000,000 to the state treasury.

CALIFORNIA BEANS WOULD FEED BOSTON

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 28--(CNB)—Believe it or not, but California annually produces enough beans to supply every man, woman and child in Boston three meals a day, 365 days a year, with enough left over to feed about 90 percent of thereof the nation as well.

The small white variety is 95 percent produced in California. California growers furnish 99¼ percent of the nation's lima production, and but one state passes this commonwealth in production of beans of any kind and that is Michigan.

E. E. Kaufman, federal-state statistician, announced these figures today in announcing that the state's crop averages 1,500,000 bushels annually.

STATE PENSION PLAN TO BE CONSIDERED

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 6—(CNB)—Recommendation to the legislature of a specific plan of insurance and pensions for the state's 8000 employes will be made by the State Pension Commission, which will submit its report within a few days, it was learned today.

While details are being withheld, it is anticipated that some system whereby employees will be invited to set aside specific amounts toward old age, to be matched from state funds, will be recommended.

San Jose—Huge revolving aerial beacon will be installed top of Bank of Italy building.

FOUR WATER PLANS CONSIDERED FOR STATE BOND VOTE

By ESTO BROUGHTON

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 6—(CNB)—Four far-reaching proposals with regard to water development in California in the immediate future, each a unit in the so-called "coordinated plan," are being seriously considered by the joint legislative water investigating committee for recommendation to the 1929 Legislature, if analysis of the trend in the committee's hearing and conferences can be taken as a criterion.

The four possible recommendations, it is asserted by those familiar with the water program, are these:

1. Construction of the Kennett Dam, with power plant, in the upper Sacramento river watershed, at a cost of $70,000,000. The committee's engineering reports indicate that the wholesaling of power from this unit would practically pay all costs of construction and maintenance in a 40-year period.

2. Erection of a great salt water barrier at Carquinez Straits which would serve to protect Delta farmers from salt water encroachment, provide a fresh water supply for industries of the north bay area, etc.

3. Probable state financing of the construction of the giant viaduct that will bring water from the proposed Boulder Canyon Dam project to southern California.

4. Construction, probably by private interests under state supervision of the Folsom Dam project on the American river. This project, it is claimed, would not only protect Sacramento and vicinity from floods but would store sufficient water to irrigate San Joaquin Valley farm lands for years to come.

Financing of the tremendous water program would be undertaken by the bond issue method, according to present plans, with the physical works of the projects serving as security for the bonds and producing the income to retire the bond over a considerable period of years.

An adequate water supply to bring agricultural lands under full production in every section of the state would be assured by the four-way program, according to the state's water experts, and would also pave the way for cheap power, tremendous industrial development and assolute protection from floods.

CHANGES PROPOSED IN SCHOOL DISTRICTS

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 6—(CNB)—That hotly debated issue, the County Unit plan of school administration, will go to the legislature in January in slightly amended form, and with San Mateo County classified as constituting four districts.

The high school district will be the unit of determining whether a district is to have "independence" rather than the elementary district; a district to be independent in the same sense as a city district, must have 1500 units of average daily attendance in districts lying within the area of the high school district and existing districts will be used as a basis of aportioning school money.

These are the chief changes made in the county unit proposal as it will be submitted to the lawmakers, State Director of Education Wm. John Cooper declared today, emphasizinz that joint union high school districts will be left unchanged until June 30, 1930, to work out their own problems by annexing sufficient territory to qualify as "independents" or adjusting themselves so that county lines may be followed in distribution of pupils.

Los Angeles would constitute 21 districts; Alameda 7; Orange, 6; Fresno and San Bernardino, 5; Imperial, San Diego, San Mateo, Sonoma and Ventura, 4; Butte, Kern, Monterey, San Joaquin, Santa Barbara, Santa Clara, Stanislaus, Tulare and Contra Costa, 3; Humboldt, Madera, Marin, Mendocino, Merced, Placer, Riverside, Sacramento, San Luis Obispo, Santa Cruz, Solano, King, two districts and all other counties, one district.

COUNTY SHARE OF GAS TAX, $58,539

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 6—(CNB)—San Mateo county will receive $58,539.89 as its share of $5,116,905.12 to be apportioned to counties as their share of $15,239,638.73 gas tax revenues of California for the half-year ending September 30, State Controller Ray L. Riley announced today.

The counties will get $190,376.65 more than during the same period last year.

The Highway Commission will receive $10,122,733.61, of which $5,116,905.12 will go to the maintenance and reconstruction account and $5,005,828.88 for new construction hnder the one-cent gas tax act. Gross receipts for the six months totaled $17,254,347 from which $1,360,138.56 were made to gasoline consumers for gasoline not under on the highways.

THE STORY

Events of the story as set forth in the journal of William A. Porter, professor of English literature:

The professor's uncle, Horace Porter, died mysteriously at his home, Twin Hollows, now the professor's property. Jane, the professor's wife, is a psychic. With their niece, Edith, the Porters go to Twin Hollows for their vacation, despite Jane's reluctance. A letter Horace had been writing at the time of his death shows that he was interested in spiritualism. It hints of danger. A "red lamp" is mentioned. They take up their residence in the lodge, because of Jane's aversion to the house. Warren Halliday, in love with Edith, comes to live in the boathouse. A number of sheep are mysteriously killed in the vicinity. The slayer leaves a cabalistic sign at the scene of the killings. Greenough, a detective, arrives and Porter has a feeling that he is under suspicion. Twin Hollows is rented to an elderly, partially paralyzed man, Bethel, who, with his secretary, Gordon, takes possession. A youth, Carroway, on watch for the sheep killer, disappears. Porter has the red lamp hidden in a room of which he alone has the key, but many people, including the professor himself, believe they have seen its reflection at Twin Hollows. Halliday is mysteriously attacked and seriously injured. Carroway is found in the bay, murdered. Mary Morrison, Porter's cook, disappears. Gordon, Bethel's secretary, is found unconscious from a blow on the head. Halliday starts an investigation of the mystery. It is discovered that Gordon frequently leaves Twin Hollows at night, clandestinely.

"I don't believe it could be done," he said, with his sideways glance at me. "He's got good ears, the doctor."

He said something before he left about looking for another job, as this one was too confining, and the old man not easy to live with. "I only took it for the summer," he said, "and I'm about fed up with it. It's too confining. And he'd let that car on his rot before he'd let me take it out."

With which clumsy attempt to alibi himself regarding the car, he took his departure. Edith believes that in some manner he knows that the car has been examined, and she may be right. . . .

Halliday's investigation of his room during his absence proceeded without difficulty. With my keys and Annie Cochran's connivance he made an easy entry, Mr. Bethel having retired for his after-luncheon siesta.

At first glance the room offered nothing, and leaving Annie Cochran on guard outside under pretense of cleaning the passage, Halliday made a more intensive search. The bed disclosed nothing, nor did the closet; his suitcase was locked, and over it Halliday spent more time than was entirely safe.

"Toward the end," he says, "I was pretty shaky. I kept thinking I heard him, and of course the more I hurried the more I bungled the thing."

He got it open at last without breaking the lock, and found in it the note-book.

(Note: I find I have given no description of the note-book in the original Journal. As it played a considerable part in the approaching tragedy, it deserves some attention.

It was a small compact volume of the loose-leaf type, a sort of diary, but not regularly kept. Most of the entries, due to the complication of the cipher, were very brief. One or two, however, occupied almost a page, and all of them had been typed.

Needless to say, the cipher was the one we had found on the scrap of paper picked up in my garage.)

The discovery of the note-book with its cipher sent his excitement to fever pitch. He ran through it for the code word, but was unable to find it. Then, replacing the book and leaving the suitcase as he had found it, he set to work more carefully on the room itself.

The coil of rope and the knife were behind a row of books on the bookshelf, a packet of typing paper and a box of carbon sheets thrown over them with apparent casualness, to conceal them still further.

So closely had he calculated the time that he had barely restored them to their places when Gordon slammed the entrance door downstairs.

Halliday had not time to make the back staircase, however. Annie Cochran opened the linen-closet door, and he bolted in there. He heard Gordon unlock his room and enter it, and almost immediately reappear and demand of Annie Cochran if she had been in it during his absence. An angry dispute followed, within a foot or two of the linen-closet, not the less acrimonious because of its lowered voices, and of an almost hysterical quality in Gordon's.

Every particle of his veneer had dropped from him, and the threats he made if he should find she had been in his room are not even to be recorded here. . . .

And now, once again, where are we? We have, as against Gordon:

(a) The knife and the coil of rope.

(b) Our belief that he uses the car, clandestinely, at night.

(c) At least an indication that he set the fire under the boathouse.

(d) The cipher, found in my garage.

(e) The note-book, in the same cipher. A man does not record his thoughts in this manner, unless he wishes to keep them hidden.

(f) The linen strips muffling the oar-locks, and suggested to Halliday today by his place of concealment. The inventory of the main house shows a certain number of linen sheets. If one is missing it will prove a strong factor in connecting him with the boat.

(g) The locking of his bedroom.

(h) Last and not least, an unpleasant personality. Halliday uses the word "degenerate," but I am not prepared to go so far.

As against all this, however, we have:

(a) The attack on him at the kitchen door, and the manner in which he was tied, corresponding to the rope about Carroway.

(b) The sheep-killing and murder of Carroway, taking place as they did before his arrival.

(c) The fact that Halliday cannot identify him as the man he picked up in his car.

(d) The distinguishing mark by which the criminal has signed his crimes, so to speak, is the circle and triangle, drawn in chalk; while this is not vital, Halliday found no chalk in the room. . . .

I have put to Halliday the boy's veiled inquiry about the doctor. It is impossible for us to experiment with the bell, but he thinks it could be distinctly heard from the main road.

On the other hand, the arrival of Hayward on the scene almost as soon as I had got there is extremely puzzling. We have tonight paced off the distance, in view of my statement that I had lighted only one match when the doctor's flashlight was turned on me.

There seems to be no doubt that Hayward was on the property last night. But I do not accept the possibility, suggested by Halliday, that as he was in Greenough's confidence he had been watching me. A man does not, I imagine, go out on such an errand with his medical bag in his hand, and the doctor had carried his bag. I recall distinctly his taking from it the dressings for Gordon's head.

August 9.

Nothing new today. Halliday watched the main house last night, but no one left it. Annie Cochran reports that Mr. Bethel is suspicious of Gordon, and that the feud between them still continues. He declines the secretary's assistance as much as possible.

That he is not certain, however, is shown by the care with which he now has the house locked up at night.

"He waits in the library," she says, "until I've locked all the doors and windows. Then I bring him the keys, except the one to the kitchen door. He lets me have that to get in with in the morning."

He is showing considerable courage, to my mind. . . .

Mrs. Livingstone told us a new story, illustrative of the general state of the local mind. She says that three nights ago Hadly, who keeps the hardware store in Oakville, when passing the cemetery where Carroway is buried, saw a figure walking slowly past the grave. It stopped, looked at the mound and then moved on, fading into nothing at the clump of evergreens beyond it.

Hadly seems to have made no further investigation!

August 10.

At midnight last night Halliday wakened me by throwing pebbles against the screen of my window. He was standing close underneath, and asked me to put on something and work my way quietly toward the other house.

"What's wrong?" I asked.

"He's getting ready to go out, I think. He put his light out at eleven, and turned it on again a few minutes ago."

Halliday moved away, and as quickly as possible I dressed and followed him. He was under the trees, waiting, when I joined him, and together we worked quietly across the garden and toward the garage, coming out beyond it, toward the lane. Here, while concealed ourselves, we had a full view of the house, but the light was out again and for a time it looked as though nothing more were to happen.

We stood together, well hidden in the shrubbery, for some time. Halliday, who has not had much sleep for a night or two, fell to yawning, and Halliday Made a More Intensive Search.

I was not much better off, when I heard some sort of stealthy movement in the woodland to our left. I touched Halliday on the arm, to find him rigid and bending forward, staring toward the house.

"He's coming," he said. "Quiet!" The boy was raising his window screen, with all possible caution. Even when it was accomplished he stood so long, probably listening and watching, that I began to think he had changed his mind and gone back to bed, but as events showed, he had done nothing of the sort.

Up to this moment I had not suspected the use of the rope, although I believe Halliday had. The darkness was extreme. But now I heard a faint scraping against the wall of the house itself and realized that Gordon was coming down by means of the rope.

His coming was as stealthy as the preliminaries had been. He was probably half-way down, coming hand over hand, before I had interpreted the sound.

I was not even aware that he had reached the ground, when I saw him, a blacker shadow among other shadows, near at hand. But he did not come directly toward the garage; he walked along under the walls of the west wing to the gun-room window and stood there. Then, with extreme caution, he raised it an inch or two, as if to reassure himself that it had been unlocked from within, and closed it again.

From there, with somewhat less caution, he moved to the corner of the house and seemed to be surveying the waterfront and the boathouse. We had our only real view of him then, as he stood silhouetted on the top of the rise. But suddenly something alarmed him. Neither Halliday nor I saw or heard anything, but evidently he did, and realized, too, his exposed position.

He dropped to the ground. So unexpected was his sudden disappearance, that I gasped; it was not until I heard him creeping along the ground that I understood his maneuver. He lost no time in his retreat, nor did he attempt to use the rope again. He raised the unlocked window, crept over the sill, and closed it again, all with surprising rapidity and silence, and sooner than we could have expected we heard him drawing up the rope from his room over head. . . .

No interpretation of this is possible without taking into consideration the really horrible stealth of the boy's manner. He was engaged on some nefarious business of his own, whether we can connect that with the crimes or not.

As to the extremely dramatic manner in which he chose to escape from the house, when he had already unlocked the gun-room window, Halliday is divided between two theories, of which he himself favors the second.

"He may be merely dramatizing himself; you'll find a certain type of degenerate mind which is always acting for its own benefit. Or—and this is more likely—our old friend Bethel is suspicious and is watching him. The old man's door commands his. He locks his door from the inside, uses his rope, and is free to go where he pleases.

"But," he added, after a pause, "he unlocks the gun-room window, too, so he can beat a retreat if he has to. That's the best I can do, and if it isn't correct it ought to be!"

Today I am convinced beyond doubt that Gordon is our criminal, and I think even Halliday is shaken. I am no detective, but it seems to me that the boy coming here during the height of the excitement about the sheep-killer and young Carroway, found the way already paved for a career of secret crime, and adopting the methods and the symbol of some still undiscovered religious maniac, has carried on, one may say, under his banner.

Certainly one fact at least supports the idea. Halliday may be right, and the attack on him not have been made by Gordon. But there seems no reason to doubt that, some time on the day before we got back, he crept in to my garage and put the infernal symbol where we found it.

We have discussed today at some length the desirability of notifying the police once more. But our recent experience with them is not reassuring. On the other hand, I feel strongly that Mr. Bethel should be warned. But Halliday argues against it.

"He knows something already," he says. "He is on guard, and the boy knows it. Then you have to remember that the game, so far, has been to strike in the dark, and run. That is, if you are correct, Skipper, and it is a game, without motive."

Probably he is right. There would be little chance for him if he attacked the old man; he is too well known to be on bad terms with him. Such a warning, also, might alarm Mr. Bethel to the point of getting rid of him, and after all the only chance we have is to let him go a certain length, and then, with our proofs, call in the police.

But I am very uneasy tonight as I make this entry. I have not Halliday's easy optimism that he "won't get away with anything without our knowing it."

August 11.

I had a visit last night from "Cuckoo" Hadly, our village Don Juan, who sells hardware over his counter to pretty village matrons, and who was dubbed "Cuckoo" some years ago by a summer visitor who saw a resemblance to Byron in him.

Hadly was slightly sheepish. He knows, and he knows I know, that his road home at night lies nowhere near the cemetery. At the same time, he had something to tell me, and was determined to go through with it.

It appears, then, that it was not near Carroway's grave that Hadly saw the figure, but in the old part of the cemetery, and that there are some facts which he has not given out.

The cemetery is surrounded by a white fence, and inside it is shrubbery. Hadly, it seems, was not alone, but was standing in the road, "talking to a friend." If, as I imagine, the friend was a woman, it was surely a safe place for a rendezvous!

It was the "friend" who saw the light, and who accounts for the suppression of this portion of the tale. It shone through the shrubbery, a small blue-white light about two feet from the ground, and directly in front of the headstone of one George Pierce, who died in the last seventeen hundreds.

Hadly did not see the light, but the "friend" persisting, he crept through the shrubbery to take a look around. It was then that he saw the figure, moving slowly and deliberately toward the trees.

He seems to have no doubt that he saw an apparition, or that the information belongs to me, the reason he gives for the latter being that George Pierce is the gentleman who was, according to local tradition, shot and killed while attempting to escape the excise in the old farmhouse which is now a part of Twin Hollows.

I have entered this here, because the day seems given over to the supernatural. We have breakfasted with the spirit world, and seem about to lunch with it.

Everything continues quiet at the other house. . . .

Jane and I today returned the Livingstones' call. Although it seems absurd, I have never quite abandoned the hope of finding, in Uncle Horace's unfinished letter, a clew to the present mystery.

I therefore took it with me, hoping for an opportunity to show it to Mrs. Livingstone. But none came. Doctor

It Was Then That He Saw the Figure.

Hayward was there when we arrived and remained after we left. Perhaps, because my own world is awry, I think the universe is so.

But it seemed to me that we were shown in to what almost amounted to a situation; that Livingstone, usually dapper and calm, was flushed, and that Mrs. Livingstone was on the verge of tears. The doctor, standing by the window, hardly acknowledged our entrance, and remained standing, glowering and biting his fingers, until we left.

He is, I understand, soon to leave for a holiday.

Tomorrow Hayward says I shall be able to see Greenough; the first intimation I have had that he is back in the neighborhood.

But I feel that my consciousness of my own innocence will be nothing against Greenough's sheer determination to prove me guilty. And yet, guilty of what? Of a bullet buried in the floor of my own house, and a broken window! We have had no further crime. Nothing is altered, save my own feeling that a net is closing around me, and that some malignant fate is sitting spider fashion in the center of it, waiting to pounce on me and destroy me.

Suppose, like a lawyer preparing a brief, I make my statement here, and tomorrow read to him? At last I can make this entry full and explicit. It passes the time, and he may be willing to listen. . . .

This is the 14th. It was, then, the early evening of the 11th, when Annie Cochran stopped at the Lodge on her way home and asked to see me at the kitchen door.

"I'm leaving, Mr. Porter," she said. "I don't like to make trouble for you, but I can't stand that secretary."

"What has he done, Annie?"

"Done!" she said, and sniffed. "He's watching me, for one thing. I never go upstairs but he's at my heels. But that's not all. He's going to make trouble for Mr. Bethel. You mark my words. And Mr. Bethel knows it; he's scared tonight."

There had been a quarrel, she said, at dinner, carefully camouflaged while she was in the room, but breaking out again the moment she left it. So far as she could make out, it had to do with the secretary's leaving the house at night, and his insistence that he go out when and how he liked. But there was something beneath that, she thought. "There was murder in that boy's face, Mr. Porter."

Mr. Bethel, she thought, was trying to quiet him, but he refused to be quieted. Finally Gordon got up and flung open the pantry door, finding her inside it, and he said, according to her: "Listening, are you? Well, you'd better watch out, or you'll get something you don't expect." Then he went into the hall, got his hat and slammed out of the house, leaving the paralytic sunk in his chair.

"He's gone? Where?"

"He didn't say. He just took the car and went."

She was uneasy; she had construed what he said as a threat against her of a serious sort, and I drove her into Oakville myself. On the way I tried to persuade her to return to her employment for a time at least, on the ground that we might need her, and she finally agreed.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

While attempting to save his wife from drowning, Earl F. Mills, 26, of Turlock, California, lost his life at Wilkinson Ferry, near Lucedale.

Family trees of Californians are to have closer scrutiny and those in whose ancestral branches are hanging other things than escutcheons may make the best of it. The American Biographical and Genealogical Society, just incorporated, is prepared to make a general survey of the arborial decorations of first and last families of the state.

Favored by a strong tail wind, a twelve-passenger airplane on the Western Air Express lines between Los Angeles and San Francisco set a record of two hours for the trip, according to reports. The average speed made by the huge plane was 160 miles an hour.

Because of a prison quarrel over a sack of smoking tobacco, Paul Rowland, San Mateo County burglar, faces death on the gallows. Rowland was convicted of murdering Elgar Morrison, a fellow convict at Folsom Prison. The jury deliberated less than forty-five minutes and the entire trial occupied only nine hours.

Attempts to muzzle the blazing Belleview gasser at Santa Fe Springs by dropping a huge inverted funnel over the mouth of the roaring inferno failed when the tremendous flow of gas tossed the four-ton steel funnel aside as though it were made of straw. A crew of men wearing asbestos suits and working in three-minute shifts held guywires while a huge traveling crane dropped the funnel over the blaze.

The special legislative committee appointed by Governor Young to outline a program for state water conservation for submission to the next Legislature conducted an executive session in the Governor's San Francisco offices, at the conclusion of which announcement was made that work on proposed legislation will be inaugurated at once. What the nature of the program will be was not divulged, but the committee's legal advisers differed considerably in oral arguments to the members.

"An Outdoor Christmas Tree for Every California Home" is the slogan of the Outdoor Christmas Tree Association of California, and President Clarence "Sandy" Pratt has set the goal at 25,000 outdoor decorated trees for Northern California this Yuletide. President Pratt has asked the following question: "Is it a prettier piture after Christmas to see a living tree in your yard, or to see the cut tree going by on a scavenger wagon or thrown into an alley to die?"

Civil service examinations for apprentice draughtsmen (women) are to be held in the near future, and closing dates for receiving of applications is set for December 19, according to announcement made. December 31 is the closing date for applications of those who would take examinations for automatic 3-A addressograph operators, F-1 addressograph operators and graphotype operators. Application blanks and additional information may be obtained at the information window at the post office.

The Tioga road, connecting Yosemite valley and Mono lake, and crossing the highest mountain pass in the state, is closed for the year, and probably will not be open to automobile traffic until the latter part of June or the first of July, 1929, according to information from James Lloyd, information ranger of Yosemite National Park. Snow is falling in the high Sierras above the 7000-foot elevation and all indications point to a very heavy snowfall during the ensuing winter. The All-Year road into Yosemite valley is the only advisable route at the present time as both the Big Oak Flat and the Wawona roads into the valley have been closed temporarily by heavy rains, according to the National Automobile Club. These roads may open again with favorable weather, but this is problematical.

It is expected that preliminary work will begin shortly on the $25,000,000 San Gabriel dam, said to be one of the greatest engineering undertakings in the world. The successful bidders will be required to give bonds in the sum of $1,000,000 to insure faithful construction, completion and payment for materials and labor. Contract for the main construction job was awarded to the lowest of six bidders by the board of supervisors. The accepted bid of $11,250,000 was said to be three-quarters of a million dollars less than the next lowest. An average force of 1800 to 2500 men is expected to be at work during the five years necessary to complete the structure. Later the bids will be advertised for about 4,000,000 barrels of cement, and this will probably stimulate the cement industry in Southern California.

Inclusion of the entire route from the Colorado river to Riverside in the secondary road system of Southern California will be asked by Riverside County when the program of the thirteen southern counties is outlined for presentation to the State Legislature. Although the matter of including the Inland route to San Diego from Riverside in the secondary state highway road system was considered, it was held that this route, although important to the two counties, would not be of as much benefit at present to the entire county of Riverside as the other route.

The performing of a successful operation for appendicitis in an airplane to demonstrate the possibility of such surgical work in war times or in other cases of emergency or stress became known today. The operation was performed on November 12, celebrated as Armistice day over a local airport by a San Diego surgeon. The patient was a San Diego woman. Two experienced pilots took up the surgeon, nurse and patient. It was reported that the plane, a large commercial machine, was in the air about an hour. The patient, it was said, has fully recovered.

Bert Mangis, 40, a bachelor, burned to death at his ranch three miles from Calistoga. His ranch house was damaged. Mangis was known to be a heavy smoker, and it is believed his bed caught fire from a cigarette.

Seven drunken drivers were arrested in Napa County during the month, making it the third highest county in the state in point of persons taken into custody for driving while intoxicated, according to Traffic Captain James Critchley.

Herbert Hoover's career in mining started in the old Reward mine, in Nevada County, according to reports from Nevada City. The president-elect is said to have received $2 a day on this first job, pushing an ore car and learning to run a transit. The report said he also made a survey of the workings of the Mayflower mine, near Nevada City.

Approval has been given to the handsome memorial to the Ninety-First "Wild West" division to be erected at Camp Lewis, Wash., by the Ninety-First Division Association, according to advice received by State Commander Belgrano of the American Legion. California contributed thousands of men to the division, which trained at Camp Lewis. The monument will become the property of the United States upon its completion.

Safe blowers exploded a considerable quantity of nitroglycerine, which wrecked two safes and badly damaged a small office in an invasion of the Marin county seat last week, but obtained nothing at all for their trouble, acording to reports filed with Sheriff Keating. Safes in the San Rafael high school and the offices of the Associated Oil Company were declared empty. Both were blown open.

Plans for building airplane landing fields in the national forests of California were announced by Assistant District Forester L. A. Barrett. He declared that there are already approximately a dozen landing fields for the use of the forest fire patrol, and also open to private use. More will be built, he said, to supply the demand for airports in the vacation country.

With definite assurance from boat racing associations and yacht clubs throughout the east and mid-west, especially from Chicago, Detroit and Houston, that they will send their fastest boats to Lake Elsinore for the National Mid-Winter Outboard Hydroplane championships December 8 and 9, the races loom as the greatest small hydroplane meet ever staged on the Pacific coast. All told, fifty or more entries are expected.

Along with Christmas shopping this year, 2,000,000 California motorists may take a present of new 1929 automobile license plates to their car. The distribution of new numeral plates states December 15 and while car owners have until the end of January to attend to registration, the California State Automobile Association advises motorists to "shop early and avoid the rush." The 1929 numeral plates are larger and of heavier metal and consist of a black background with orange figures. The numeral system is changed by the interjection of letters to keep the numbers within six figures or less, somewhat similar to the New York license plate.

California still leads the United States in hydroelectric power production, according to statistics prepared by the United States Department of the Interior under date of November 1, 1928. This state is second in the total amount of power of all kinds generated, including hydroelectric and steam-generated electricity, New York state being first, although its hydroelectric production is considerably below that of the Golden State. The ratio is 50 per cent greater in all power produced in favor of the state of New York, while California exceeds New York in hydroelectric output by approximately 50 per cent. These statistics include the months of June, July and August of this year.

Deer are growing so numerous in several of the national forests in the west that they are in danger of starvation—and most of their plight is due to their protection by man. Everywhere on the national forests, the forest service points out, the number of deer is increasing. Man by his slaughter of mountain lions, wolves, lynxes and other preying animals has destroyed nature's balance. Now the chief natural checks on the deer are famine and disease, the forest service said. When an excessive number of animals are seeking sustenance a short forage crop, or a hard winter results in a struggle for life under which the weaker animals often succumb in large numbers. Wandering half-starved into resorts, farms and gardens on the outskirts of cities, deers have become a nuisance in various parts of California, complaints testify. Last year the Fish and Game Commission reported that 20,000 deer were killed in California, with Mendocino County holding the record with 1406 killed, but nevertheless, sportsmen say, they have been breeding much faster.

Mrs. Ina Brosseau, 40, State Library employe, was killed in her bath when an electric heating device accidentally fell into the tub of water.

Following the trail of early settlers, a county road is soon to be built from Collier's Crossing, north of Livingston on the Southern Pacific railroad, to Cortez, on the Santa Fe. The distance is about 15 miles. Fenced farms of settlers brought about the abandonment of the oil trail, which is to be reopened as a gravelled or oiled road, according to announcement by Supervisor Frank Pebley of the road district.

One of the most picturesque Indian figures in Northern California passed with the death, near Alturas, Modoc County, of Sam Steele, chief medicine man of the Pit River tribe. In the early days of Modoc County Steele and his warriors joined forces with the whites against the Modocs and Piutes, and in the sixties the medicine man served with distinction as a scout under General George Crook in the campaign to subdue the Piutes. Modoc County officials and pioneers paid tribute to the aged Indian at funeral services in Alturas.

When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Out of the defective stumps on a collection of love letters, a girl in northern Sweden has obtained a handsome dowry. Some time ago the Swedish post office department issued a number of reprinted stamps. On certain sheets the new denomination was by mistake put upside down, thereby making them extremely rare in collectors' eyes. These were bought by a young man who had promised his sweetheart to write her every day. He kept his vow and after a month the girl had received 30 letters, all bearing the faulty stamps. A philatelist discovered their existence and offered her 200 crowns each and she disposed of the entire 30 for 6,000 crowns (about $1,500).

MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB

Appertaining to Finance

MOST of us are familiar with the story of the improvident person who, on being warned by the head of his bank that he must make extensive deposits immediately in order that his drawing account might balance, made answer as follows:

"Say, look here! I'm getting good and tired of having you fellows bothering me about these petty financial details. If you begin pestering me again I'll be derned if I don't take my overdraft out of your bank and transfer it to the Second National, across the street."

There's a companion story for this, not quite so old:

A gentleman in a southern town, well known as brilliant but careless, was persistent in his applications for loans and extremely tardy about repaying them. He had induced a local bank to let him have forty dollars, and gave his note therefor.

At the end of each 30-day period he invariably appeared and asked that the note be renewed; and as there was nothing else to do, the bank always renewed it.

One day he appeared and said to the cashier:

"I'd like to renew that paper of mine you have here."

"Certainly," replied the cashier; "I'll fix it up for you."

The cashier made the proper preparations for the renewal, and then he said:

"Say, the directors were talking about this paper of yours the other day. They decided that they wouldn't charge you interest on it any longer."

"That's very considerate of them," was the reply. "I'm mighty glad to hear it. I certainly am under obligations to them."

"Yes," continued the cashier, "we're not going to charge you interest, we're going to charge you storage!"

The Temperamental Hound-Dawg

ABOUT once in so often some impassioned partisan rises up in congress or elsewhere and accuses the majority party or the administration or somebody of bribery, corruption, fraud and incompetency, and announces his intention of smoking the scoundrels out. This type of person is especially numerous in Presidential years, but we have him other years, too.

A few years ago—it was in 1916, I believe, there was a prominent spellbinder on the Republican side who set forth upon his campaigning with the avowed intention of proving that wholesale Democratic stupidity at Washington had practically ruined the country and then, being challenged for facts to back up his accusation, was so shy of actual ammunition that for the moment he could point only to the instance of a petty officeholder, a holdover from the Taft administration who, in alleged violation of civil service rules, had been ousted from his job to make room for a Wilson man.

The incident reminded a friend of mine down South of a certain gifted hound dog which a certain Kentucky pioneer owned. He said to me:

"The old fellow used to tell me that when his father came out over the Wilderness trail from North Carolina he brought with him the fastest, the best-bred, the keenest-nosed hound that had ever been seen in the infant settlements beyond the mountains. But the dog suffered from a temperamental defect which militated against his success.

"At sunrise he would start out on his own hook after deer. He would jump a buck and run him for miles. When the buck was on the point of exhaustion the hound's nostrils would catch the taint in the air where a fox had crossed the trail, and he would instantly decide that, after all, fox was what he had come for; and he would turn aside to pursue the fox.

"Perhaps an hour later, when the chase was growing warmer every minute, his keen nose would detect the presence of a rabbit, and he would go after the cottontail, with the inevitable result that by four o'clock in the afternoon that hound would be thirty or forty miles away from home, in a swamp, with a chipmunk treed!"

Rubber Improves Violins

Modern violins may be made to rival the product of the old masters by impregnating the wood with rubber latex before varnishing, according to the claim of a German investigator named Ditmar Graz, writing in the scientific magazine, Natur and Kultur. He states that this treatment causes the wood to remain permanently elastic.

For Discolored China

To remove brown marks from china put the articles in a saucepan with cold water and a lump of soda. Put the pan on the stove and let it boil for fifteen minutes. Then rinse the china well and you will find that the marks have disappeared.

At the Summer Hotel

One of the reasons why many vacations are a failure is that one talks for hours on petty topics, arguing matters of fact that could be settled in a minute by turning to a reference book. —Woman's Home Companion.

Criticism Not Enough

The prime thing that every man who takes an interest should remember is that he must act, and not merely criticize the actions of others.—Theodore Roosevelt.

Dislike for Cobb and Speaker

HATRED for Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker that has smoldered for years in the west, and that broke out in a consuming fire in the last series of the season, cost the Athletics any chance they might have had to win the American league pennant for the year 1928.

So strong was the dislike—or, to use the stronger word, hate—for both these veterans in New York, Detroit, St. Louis and Cleveland that the players on all these teams banded together to kill off the Mackmen, if such could be the case.

This is the amazing story that came out of a parley between players and newspaper men just before the gang trekked westward for the Missouri end of the world's series. It all came about through an innocent question raised by yours truly, writes Gordon Mackay in the Philadelphia Record. The query in brief was this:

"What happened to the Athletics in the final series in the west?"

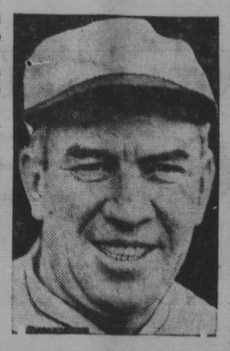
"I'll tell you," spoke up a veteran writer from Detroit who has been engaged in baseball writing for almost twenty years.

"The clubs in the west so hated Cobb and Speaker that they determined not to let them into a world series. And they all wanted Connie Mack to win, too.

"Take our club. While the Yankees were out in front by thirteen and a half games and it looked all over little attention was paid to the Athletics by any club. But when the Macks came west with a chance to win the pennant, I know that players on our team vowed that they would never let Ty Cobb get into another world's series if they could help it.

"They were keyed up to lick the Athletics and not even give them a thing. That's the reason they grabbed two of the games from them. Then they turned around, and while they played to win they just ran out their string against the Yankees."

"Put St. Louis in the same boat, voiced a writer of years of experience in the Missouri metropolis. "Maybe that Detroit alumni on our club didn't go strong. Manush, Manush, Lu Blue—I wish you could have heard those babies talk about Cobb getting into the series.



Tris Speaker.

"I know that they played their heads off to beat the Athletics, and all the while they were sorry that Connie Mack wasn't going to get into it. For everybody thinks the world of Connie."

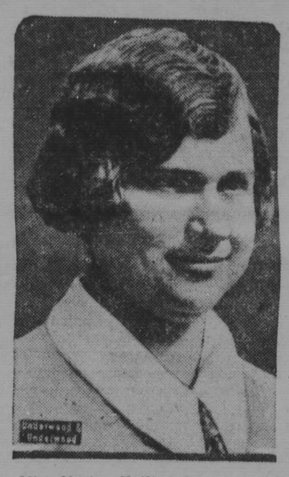
"Now let me say a word," chipped in one of the New York writers. "You should hear the Yankees talking about the pennant. It's too late to fool anybody now, but there was a time when the Yanks thought they would miss out on the rag.

"'Gee,' several of them told me, 'I'd like to see Connie in a series, but those other two birds, Cobb and Speaker, it sure would make me mad to see them in there.'"

"What caused this intense feeling against them?" we asked this Manhattan scribe.

"Darned if I know," he answered, "except that it has been gathering over a string of years. There are several other birds on the Athletics that our club hasn't much use for and they pan them when they have a chance. But Cobb and Speaker were the boys who got the razzberries right along.

Goes With Glenna



Miss Marion Hollins, former national golf champion, who with the present champion, Miss Glenna Collett, will represent the United States in next year's Ladies' Golf Championship of Great Britain at St. Andrews, Scotland.

Ruth Started Yankees on Big Winning Streak

Miller Huggins pointed out recently that it is difficult to keep up an aggressive spirit in a team that has a long lead.

In 1927 the Yankees were 11 games in front on July 5. They appeared to have the pennant cinched. Then they slumped.

Huggins became worried, but George Herman Erhardt Ruth supplied a solution. Ruth decided that with the pennant safely won for the Yankees he could step out and win some individual honors for himself and he went after the home run record. Ruth started clouting home runs with a thrilling regularity and the Yankees fell right into line. Behind Ruth's slugging the entire team began slugging with the result that the Yankees made a runaway race of it. They won the pennant by 19 full games.

University of Iowa Is to Build New Stadium

The University of Iowa will have a new stadium, designed to seat from 60,000 to 80,000 persons, according to plans announced by Paul E. Belting, director of physical education. Probable cost of the plant was not mentioned.

The new athletic council, with the new alumni representatives attending, unanimously authorized Doctor Belting to proceed with plans for erection of the stadium, which, it was hoped, would be completed for the next homecoming grid game. The recommendations will be submitted to the state board of education and, if accepted, work will start immediately.

The stadium would be located on land west of the field house, and a baseball field and an outdoor track will be included.

Fined as Heckler

A fine of $250 was imposed by the state athletic commission upon Abe Katz, manager of Sammy Baker, New York boxer, for alleged attempts to "intimidate and bulldoze" Referee Abe Roth when the latter was giving Baker and Jackie Felds, of Los Angeles, ring instructions. Katz was acting as a second for Baker. He engaged in an argument with the referee, attempting Roth declared, "to intimidate, bulldoze and highhand" him, and otherwise acted in a boisterous way.

BROOKLYN NEEDS FIELD STRENGTH

Talk Trade of Dazzy Vance for Better Players.

Two factions of the Brooklyn baseball club are at present trading arguments as to the wisdom of parting with Dazzy Vance, the strike-out king of National league pitchers, in exchange for a bundle of currency and some players.

One faction of the club holds that Vance is the backbone of the team. The other asserts that the retention of the star pitcher will not improve Brooklyn's prospects for the 1929 season because the team doesn't amount to much outside of the pitcher's box.

Brooklyn could get more in cash and players for Vance right now than any other club could obtain for any other pitcher in the United States—and it is not certain at that whether Vance is still in his best vigor.

Petty, the southpaw star, would like to get away. If a trade can be made for Petty there is at least one club that will take him—the Pittsburgh Pirates. Manager Donie Bush of Pittsburgh regards Petty as one of the best left-handers in baseball. Pittsburgh is in need of a high-class left-hander who can help the Pirates swing along next year to their attempt to beat St. Louis and Chicago in the West and New York in the East.

Brooklyn cannot get for Petty of course, what it could get for Vance. Two or three seasons ago the Brooklyn club was urged to trade Vance for George Kelly and a pile of coin but would not do so, although in that season it was plainly evident that Brooklyn had nothing but pitchers.

Petty and Elliott faltered somewhat in 1928 but McWeeny was better than ever and young William Watson Clark proved to be more than a mere promise. Despite that, Brooklyn would not have been as well off in pitching if Vance had not won from some National league clubs with great decisiveness. He did best of all against Boston, pitching six winning games against that demoralized team. He won one from the Phillies and lost one, which was the most surprising result of all. From the Giants, Dazzy won three games while losing two. The St. Louis Cardinals lost three games to him and won but two.

Vance's really greatest feat in 1928 was against the Chicago Cubs. He won five games from the Cubs and lost one of them—and that, with the nonsuccess of the Cubs against the Phillies, is reason enough why the Chicago team did not win the pennant this year.

Harry Heilmann Is More Valuable at First Base

Harry Heilmann is more valuable at first base than in the outfield, writes H. C. Salsinger of the Detroit News.

He is a better fielder and, since he was switched to the position, has batted better.

It was Samuel Crawford who first pointed out that a big man is better at first than in the outfield.

There are few chances in the outfield, and the big man, much slower than the smaller outfielders, finds it difficult to start quickly after being relaxed for comparatively long periods of time. It is more difficult for him to spring into a play.

There is little relaxation at first base. The man playing the position is kept fairly much on the move, and big men, unable to relax at first, remain attuned.

Crawford, who hated to play first base, admitted he could do much better there than in right field, where his play was slow and cumbersome.

Heilmann, who has no such dislike for first base play, does much better there than he ever did in the outfield.

Giants Get Leach

Fred Leach, Philadelphia National's outfielder, who was made a member of the New York Giants in the first trade of the hot-stove league season, which sent Frank ("Lefty") Odoul to the lowly Philadelphia team. Leach has never hit below .300 since he has been in the majors. He joined the Phillies in 1925.

Big League Season to Open One Week Later

Under present plans, the major league baseball campaigns will start a week later in 1929 than they did this year. John Heydler, president of the National league, said it was expected to open the season in both leagues on April 16 and close on September 29.

The 1928 season opened on April 11 and closed September 29, but weather conditions, especially in the East, canceled any advantage there might have been in the early opening.

Herbert C. Gee of Anamosa, Iowa, seventeen years old, is the youngest athlete to ever captain a sports team at the University of Iowa. Gee will lead the Hawkeye gymnasts this season. As a sophomore last season the youngster excelled in the parallel bar and tumbling events, winning points in western conference meets. He is a big fellow, but very fast on his feet.

John's Mother Praises Doctor

There isn't a mother living who won't agree that no half-sick child should be the subject for an experiment with medicines of uncertain merit. When your child is bilious, headachy, half-sick, feverish, restless, with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy, you know that nine times out of ten it's a sign his little stomach and bowels need purging. And when you know that for over fifty years leading physicians have endorsed one preparation for this condition, there doesn't seem to be any reason for "trying" things.

Rich, fruity California Fig Syrup clears the little stomach and bowels gently, harmlessly and in a hurry. It regulates the bowels, gives tone and strength to them and to the stomach; and helps to give your child new strength, energy and vitality. Thousands of Western mothers praise it. Mrs. Joseph W. Hill, 4306 Bedford Ave., Omaha, Nebraska, says: "I'll never forget the doctor who got me to give my baby boy, John, California Fig Syrup. Nothing else seemed to help his weak bowels. That was when he was just a baby. He suffered a good deal before I gave him Fig Syrup, but it stopped his trouble quick. I have used it with him for colds and little upset spells ever since. I consider him a Fig Syrup boy."

Insist on the genuine article. See that the carton bears the word "California." Over four million bottles used a year.

Rudyard Kipling never was celebrated for a mild and amiable temperament. He never suffered fools gladly and now he hates them more than ever. An American lady is said to have once looked long upon him, "a small man dressed to match his old pipe," she described him and then said to him disappointedly: "Mr. Kipling, I thought you would be different."

"Oh, I am!" said Kipling tartly, "but this is my day off."

Something Unusual in Line of Merit Award

Eliel Lofgren, Sweden's minister of foreign affairs, has a reputation for absent-mindedness, and a new incident to illustrate his failing was brought out in the recent electoral campaign. When holding the post of minister of justice in a previous cabinet, he was commissioned to bestow a decoration upon a contractor of a small city in southern Sweden. At a formal dinner Lofgren made a speech and at the end presented the guest of honor with a small leather case. The recipient opened it but hurriedly closed the lid and put the box in his pocket, thereby earning the esteem of his fellow-guests as an extremely modest man. The next morning, when the cabinet member started his shave, he was surprised to find instead of a razor in his shaving kit, a bright and shining star of gold and enamel which he thought he had presented to the contractor the night before.

MENLO RECALL CAUSES FUROR

Sensation followed sensation at the meeting of the city council last Tuesday evening. A full board was present. The fire works started when K. L. Martin, the local plumber, Carl Lindquist and T. E. Hunnell marched up to the clerk's desk just when the meeting of the council had been called to order and filed a recall petition containing 232 signatures asking the recall of Councilman A. E. Blake and Alexander Walker on the ground of extravagant expenditure of public money. The hall was packed to the doors with a crowd anxious to see and watch the proceedings. The certmony was short. After the filing of the voluminous document the trio who had secured the signatures, filed down the aisle to the door.

The big sensation of the evening then followed. Mrs. Fannie I. Kurtz, the city clerk, facing the audience began the reading of a typewritten statement which she charged that she had been grossly insulted at the last meeting of the council by Mayor Weeden and Councilman Dale who charged her with malfeasance in office and derelection of duty. It seems that at the last meeting the claims for the newly purchased motorcycle with siren amounting to $188.50 came up and was discussed, the mayor holding that it had been paid and failed to approve the bill. Dale contended that the warrant had already been drawn. Some feeling was exhibited and the outcome was that the clerk agreed to investigate the matter, holding that it had not been settled and the claim before the council was perfectly in order and should be paid. No doubt some hot words were exchanged at the time, however, nothing was done at the moment. Mrs. Kurtz showed by her boons and warrants that the claim was not paid at the time the question came up. Having thus shown her efficiency and proven her position she turned dramatically to Mayor Weeden and demanded a public apology. The mayor said he did not sign the second claim believing it was not paid but if he were in error he would gladly apologize. Turning to Dale, Mrs. Kurtz made the same demands. Dale refused to apologize, claiming that for all he knew the first warrant was destroyed. He woudn't budge from his position. Mrs. Kurtz with raised hands and with dramatic effect branded him a coward. At this juncture, George P. Baron of Stanford Park, in a loud voice, declared: "You will apologize to this little woman before you leave the hall." Others called for the apology but Dale remained deaf to their cries. This closed the incident and Mrs. Kurtz left for her home, taking with her the recall petition. There was some demonstration after the meeting but nobody was hurt.

The council then resumed regular business.

HISTORY SKETCH OF MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.

MONTGOMERY WARD & COMPANY, one of the nation's largest mercantile institutions, will open its branch store in Redwood City tomorrow. The local branch will occupy a building just completed for the company at 631 Broadway. This store will serve as a trading center for the peninsula as it is intended to serve the entire district between San Francisco and San Jose. The opening of the Montgomery Ward store in Redwood City marks an important development in the business district of this city.

Speaking of the place in this community which the new store is expected to fill, J. P. Seagrave, manager of the local store said, "Our new store will be what might be termed a home-furnishing and hardware department store and will carry a complete line of furniture, rugs, draperies, household wares, stoves, radios, hardware, plumbing, automobile tires and auto accessories. We will also carry a full line of men's, women's and children's apparel.

"Our new store is one of the large number being operated by Montgomery Ward & Co. all over the United States. These stores have proved immensely popular shopping centers wherever opened. They are new type retail stores and incorporate the latest ideas in display fixtures, tables and arrangement for the shopper's convenience. Merchandise will be displayed where it can be seen and handled, and when purchased can be taken away immediately as in any other department store.

"I am happy to be in Redwood City and feel that our new store will be an asset to your city.

Montgomery Ward & Company, now one of the nation's largest mercantile institutions, had its beginning in 1872, when it was founded by A. Montgomery Ward and the business was carried on in a small room, 12 by 14 feet in size.

Ward had worked in a small general store in St. Joseph, Michigan. The customers he waited upon were largely farmers. He knew them and liked them. They were customers, and they were friends, too. From them and from his own experience he knew farm conditions, likes and the pleasures and difficulties of the farmer. He saw the farmer wrested a hard living from the soil and buying goods was a matter of great inconvenience and little satisfaction. He saw the farmer, with no good markets readily accessible, was not getting a proper return for his time and money. Before the farmer could buy things to wear and things to use, he paid several profits on them.

WILL MANAGE WARD'S

J. P. Seagrave, manager in charge of Montgomery Ward & Co's. new store

Decided to Change

Ward determined to change all this. He decided to bring the markets to the farmer; to sell him worthy goods through printed descriptions sent by mail; to buy goods direct from manufacturers and deliver to his customer with only one small profit.

It was not long before Ward realized he had undertaken a task too great for one man's hands and chose his friend, George R. Thorne, of Kalamazoo, Michigan, to help him as a partner in the business.

Their first catalogue was an eight-page book about three by five inches in size. It was only a price list with no illustrations and contained but a few dozen items, most of which were dry goods.

Issued Catalogue

In 1876 they issued a catalogue of 150 pages with illustrations of quite a variety of merchandise, and did a total business of $300,000 for that year.

Built in 1900

In 1900 they completed in Chicago, on Michigan boulevard, the great structure bearing its high tower which still stands today as a monument to a great achievement. The first branch house was opened in Kansas City in 1904. A warehouse was opened at Fort Worth in 1911.

In 1913 it was necessary to begin the erection of the big house now occupied at Kansas City. The same year a house was opened in Portland, Oregon, and business increased until in 1920 it was necessary to erect the present building. The St. Paul house was opened in 1921.

A house was opened in Oakland in 1923. The following year Fort Worth moved into larger quarters. In 1925 the Baltimore house was opened and the same year additions were built to enlarge the Kansas City, St. Paul, and Oakland houses. Other additions were built for Baltimore and Oakland houses in 1926.

VICTOR DOPPEE

Plumbing Contractor
207 Hopkins Ave., Redwood City

FOREWORD

THE building which will be occupied by the local branch of Montgomery Ward & Company was completed this week by Gus Waller, Redwood City contractor. The building was constructed in less than 90 days from the first breaking of ground. In order that the company might be open for business before the Christmas season, the contractor exerted his utmost efforts toward speedy construction. Extra men were employed in order that work might be continued on Saturday and Sunday.

The new structure has a frontage of 75 feet on Broadway and is 190 feet in depth, the greatest floor space of any single store in Redwood City. A mezzanine floor in the rear increases this space approximately a third.

The land upon which the new building stands belongs to the Andrews Investment Co. of San Francisco, and was purchased for about $35,000. The sale of the land and the lease to the Montgomery Ward Company were made by the local realty firms of Whitcomb & Smith and Henry Witte. The property was purchased from Ellis J. Arkush of Arkush Peninsula Theatres.

The land was formerly a portion of the Stevens Nursery, one of the pioneer nurseries of the county, and for many years one of the show places of Redwood City. The nursery was discontinued more than 20 years ago upon the death of George Stevens, the proprietor. Some years later his widow sold the property to the Baptist Conference, who later sold it to a reality firm from whom the Arkush interests secured it a few years ago.

The new building's completed cost is estimated at $34,000. Owing to a desire on the part of those concerned with the building, practically all of the work was done by firms of this district and by local men. The electrical work was installed by the Ryan Electric Co. This concern is also installing the wiring in the new Sequoia building which is nearing completion on Broadway. Many of the largest electrical contracts in the county have been completed by this concern, as well as many in other parts of the state.

All the sand, gravel, cement and plaster for the new structure were supplied by Redwood Materials Co., which is also furnishing supplies for the new Sequoia building. Plumbing work in the building was done by Victor Doppee. The Buthmann Tile Company installed the tiling which forms an attractive part of the new building, while the hardwood floors were laid by the Redwood Hardwood Floor Co.

The structure is of re-enforced concrete, and the cement work was done by W. O. Tyson. The sheet metal work was done by the Wallace Sheet Metal Works, and the painting was done by the Redwood Paint Co. All lumber was supplied by the Sudden Lumber Company. The plastering was done by the Redwood Plastering Co.

The Montgomery Ward Company have been bending every effort to have the store in order for the opening tomorrow morning. A crew of 65 men have been busy installing fixtures and arranging stock under the directions of J. P. Seagrave, the local manager.

Speaking of his employes yesterday, Mr. Seagrave stated that the company will maintain a force of about 60 during the Chirstmas rush. The ordinary run of business at the store he estimates will require the services of about 35 persons. Of these, he said, fully 90 per cent will be from this section, as the concern believes in employing as much local help as is possible.

The manager of the store here is an experienced storekeeper. He has been with the Montgomery Ward Company for more than ten years and has opened a number of their largest stores, among them the one at San Jose. He will be located here permanently and will make his home in this city.
